EXPLOSION OF THE H. R. W. HILL.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

NAMES OF THE DEAD AND WOUNDED.

The steamer Wm. L. Levy, Capt. Puckett, hence for Alexandria, when opposite College point, was hailed by the steamer H. R. W. Hill, on Wednesday night at about 12 o'clock.

The Levy returned last evening, having in tow the Hill, when she landed her at the foot of Girard street.

At the time of the explosion there was a head of steam on varying from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and twenty-five pounds to the square inch—the usual power—but going to the fact that Australia Landing the boat had run over a stump, knocking a hole in her hull, and no doubt thereby affecting the boilers, this explosion may be conjectured.

The engineer, however, told us that the boiler head is in a cast iron, and bears the mark of an old crack in the rim, where it was severed from the main boiler.

The explosion is of a curious character. The boiler head is driven out only from the upper part, and doubled over in its center, having the appearance of a circular bowl cover half placed.

When the explosion took place the boiler-head was partly bent over, and consequently the steam and water escaped upwards in great force, and broke the floor of the saloon and damaged some of the state-rooms.

As the steam and water gained egress, the pressure against the boiler-head caused it to fall over as already described, and then the steam and water took a horizontal course, dashing in the greater fury all over the cotton bales, where some forty-five persons, deck passengers and all hands, all Irishmen, were sleeping.

From Mr. Jonson, a passenger, we learn that on Wednesday night at 11 o'clock the head of the boiler above described blew out, passing, with its contents, (steam and water) entirely through the engine room, killing the second engineer and the stoker, both of whom were on watch, and also killing some thirty or forty deck hands and passengers; also, badly wounding fifty or sixty more.

None of the cabin passengers were injured except Mr. Johnson, who was having his right hand slightly wounded.

The officers all escaped without injury.

The barber, G. W. Seury of Nashville, and Charles Hagger of Nashville, jumped overboard and were drowned.

Mr. Glidden Marks of New Albany, was instantly killed. Henry Foster of Hoop Island was considerably scalded, but not dangerously.

A young boy, name unknown, who had jumped overboard, succeeded in gaining the shore.

Major Monroe quickly, together with Lieut. Jacques and a body of police, were in attendance on the Hill last evening, in removing the wounded to the hospital; also rendering all aid to those whose precarious situations required immediate attention.

Nine wounded men were sent to the Charity Hospital, three to Dr. Stone's Infirmary, and two are still on board the Hill, badly scalded.

It was a melancholy spectacle, to behold the whole cabin of the Hill strewn with the wounded, dead and dying, and every person on board endeavoring to do his utmost to relieve the suffering of the unfortunate.

Not a female was hurt on board.

The dead bodies make an exhibition beyond description. Each body was stripped, placed on a pallet, and laid out on the saloon deck and covered with sheets.

Some of the bodies are entirely skinned, and present a horrible sight, like highly colored Indians. Others are stripped of skin in various parts, presenting a fearful appearance.

It is said that a certain boat passed the Hill at the time of the accident, and the agonizing yells and piercing shrieks of the dying and wounded could be heard a distance of five or six miles, and the boat alluded to was even hailed, still she refused assistance, as was seen by our river news-report.

Last night we visited the Charity Hospital, and found that one of the sufferers had breathed his last—died in excessive agony.

The others in the hospital, some of whose names are ascertained to be John Malley, Patrick Parle, John Hackett, are doing as well as is possible under their painful condition, still, some of them may not live during the night.

The clerk of the Hill, not having the list of killed and wounded yet correctly made out, requested us to wait their publication until this noon.

The damage to the Hill is trifling compared with the loss of life, and being the boiler and the small damage to the saloon floor, she is scarcely injured.
